Title	The Political Machine and Electoral Institutions – Targeting Voters, Brokers, and the State
Summary	The dissertation studies how political machines interact with electoral institutions to limit political competition. I argue that machines optimally adapt their strategies when electoral institutions are not object of partisan control, but actively manipulate these very institutions, when institutions are not autonomous.
Teaching	Comparative politics (3rd year ug), methodology (2nd year ug), programming (g) and supervision of master's theses.
Supervising committee	Jacob Hariri (Copenhagen), Horacio Larreguy (Harvard), Mogens Justesen (Copenhagen Business School).
Assessment committee	Jessica Gottlieb (Texas A&M), Thad Dunning (UC Berkeley), Anne Rasmussen (internal).
Visiting fellowships	Fulbright Scholar, Harvard Institute for Quantitative Social Science (Jan-Aug 2019). Visiting fellow, Center on the Politics of Development, UC Berkeley (March 2019).
